There never was a more popular man on the force than Lightning Charlie," said ex-Alderman Morris, as he stood near the steps of the late Capt. McDonnell's residence in King street this morning, watching the surging crowds jostling each other in their efforts to obtain a position in the line and gain a last glimpse of the well known features over which the grave was so soon to close.

It was evidently true, for the street in both directions from Variek to McDougall was crowded with men, women and children, who had braved the sweltering heat of the sun to honor the memory of the brave commander they had known and respected so

The undertaker had finished his labor by o'clock this morning and the body lay in a handsome casket in the little front parlor, surrounded with beautiful floral gifts from his friends and comrades, and candles burning with a dim light at the head.

The room was heavily draped in black. Between the windows stood a huge cross, six feet high, of white roses and lilies, with a wreath of immortelles, a gift from the Surroundent investigation and cantains of

Behind the lid of the casket, which was thrown back, showing the remains at full length in capiain's uniform, was a collection of foral crosses, harps, columns and pillars, many of which had been sent in by members of his own precinct and by private friends. The rich casket was of rosewood covered with black cloth, with six silver handles supporting abony bars, and lined with white satin. The inscription upon the solid silver plate on the inner side of the lid was:

CHARLES MCDONNELL, DIED 14TH AUGUST, 1888, DIED 14TH AUGUST, AGED 46 YEARS.

The face of the dead Captain was wonderfully life-like, and bore an expression of peaceful repose that betokened the calm and painless manner of his death.

As early as 7 o'clock this morning a group began to collect in front of the house, and when the door was opened there was a steady flow of hymanist through the parrow door.

flow of humanity through the narrow door-ways and about the casket until the hour ar-rived for the removal of the remsins.

Just before 10 o'clock the pressure was the greatest, and owing to the lack of time many who desired to view the body were obliged to go away disappointed.

A great many women who, as neighbors, had known the Captain well during his life, were so affected that they came from the house weeping. Just after 10 o'clock the members of the

It was decided last night to have no religious services in this city, but to take the remains immediately to the depot as soon as possible after opportunity had been given the friends to view them.

The arrangements, as decided upon yesterday at the meeting of the captains, were carried out in every particular. Inspector Steers was in command of the funeral procession, which consisted of a servenut, two

The line of march was down King street, to Varick, to Charlton, to Prince, when the station-house, draped in black, was sainted, to South Fifth avenue, scross the park to Fifth avenue, to Thirty-ninth street, to Fourth avenue, to the Grand Central Depot.

At the corner of Fourteenth street Inspector Steers suddenly grew dizzy, but continued to march until he was finally overcome by exhaustion from heat. He was taken in a cab to the drug store under the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where he was revived. WILL THERE BE TROUBLE AT THE GRAVE. BIRMINOHAM, Conn., Aug. 16.—The grave for the reception of the remains of the late Capt. McDonnell is not yet dug in the Catholic Cemetery, as Rev. Father Kennedy is desirous of hearing of the religious standing of the Captain, and has telegraphed New York priests for instructions.

Bif the Captain had not lived up to at least a portion of the rules of the Church his remains will not be interred beside those of his children.

He replied at once that Capt. McDonnell was a good Catholic, and that the only reason why the funeral services had not been held in his church was on account of lack of time. He thought that there would be no such trouble as appeared to be anticipated.

TRIED HARD TO DIE.

Young Brooklyn Man Takes Potson and Turns on the Gas in a Bowery Hotel. About 2 o'clock this morning a young man entered the Occidental Hotel, on the South west corner of Broome street and the Bowery, and paid 50 cents for a room.

the house, in making his rounds, noticed a strong smell of gas issuing from the room, and although he knocked hard on the door he could get no reply.

The door was then forced open, and the lodger was found lying unconscious upon his couch undressed. The room was full of gas, the stop-cockat the fixture having been opened wide. By his side upon a washstand was a box that contained rat poison, of which he had swallowed a portion.

Notwithstanding this double and determined attempt to end his existence the man's life will undoubtedly be saved. He was removed to St. Vincent's Hospital, where the stomach pump was effectually used and other restoratives were applied.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16, 1888.

I came here to die. I have fully considered what I intend doing, but can see no other way out of my trouble. My name is William J. Soldwedel, address 32. Ten Eyek street. Brooklyn, N. Y.

Kindly let my cousin know of this as soon as possible—John Dohse, 839 Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

My last wish is, do not let my poor mother know of this, but wait until she returns. I owe my good friend Frank K.— about $20, which kindly pay. I also owe my consin John shout $10 and my sister $16; also $25 which I collected, but squandered, all of which can be paid out of the money I have on deposit. I blanke no one but myself, and hope you will not trouble good Baisy H.—, as she has repeatedly tried to make me reform.

If possible, please ask my clums, Louis, Charles L., Frank, Charles S., and Willie Mahn to carry my coffin to the hearse. Good-by all.

My poor mother, forgive your wayward soo.

YELLOW JACK BARBED OUT.

The Quarantine Officials Believe He Canno Enter New York. The apprehensions of many people that yellow fever will get brought to New York from Florida or some Atlantic seaport are not allayed by this muggy weather, which would give the epidemic such a fine send-off. The report that a Swedish sailor died of fever on the schooner Lizzie Chadwick, from Mobile, just before Health Officer William M. Smith boarded the vessel yesterday, has not had a calming effect on those nervous souls who dread the arrival of this ghastly visitant.

Dr. Smith's report, however, declares that the seaman who died, a Swede named Oscar Carlson, was afflicted with "congestive remittent fever."

Carlson, was afflicted with "congestive remittent fever."

At the office of the Quarantine Commission there seemed to be little solicitude on the point this morning, as it it is felt that every precaution is being exercised to prevent any importation of the drea-iful malady into this city. The Samuel D. Carleton has not yet, however, reached her station in the bay, three miles below Swinburne Island. Some delay in her equipment has prevented her from proceeding to her post. At the office of the commission they say she will certainly be there before the end of the week.

Any vessel that is suspected is detained in quarantine for such a time as would allow the disease to develop, if it were really present. Five days are required for this. The cargo of any suspected vessel is fumigated at Quarantine and then subjected to a second fumigation in port.

With such precautions properly carried out, the danger of infection for New York is reduced to a minimum, and any great fearfulness is unnecessay.

[SPECIAL TO THE SVENING WORLD.] Nonwalk, Conn., Aug. 16.—On Monday evening Patrick Cahill, a young man notorious for indulging in drunken fights, came to this borough from the Bridgeport Jail, where he had just served out a 'sentence. He immediately made a round of the saloons, and was soon in fighting condition. Chief of Police John S. Lockwood saw him pass, and immediately followed him up River street, with a large crowd at his beels.

Cahill secured possession of a shovel, which he swung around him, keeping the crowd at bay, but Constable Wallace Dann leaped on him and bore him to the ground, in which condition he was delivered to Lockwood as prisoner.

Munson Hoyt immediately fastened each end of a rope with a half hitch around Cahill's ankles, and secured him to the axle of a road wagon, driven by William E. Dann. The horse was started, and for the first half dozen yards Cahill's head was held up by the officers, but it was afterwards dropped, and he was drawn along at full length over board walks, gutters, sidewalks and pavements, the prisoner writhing and twisting in every way in his strugles to free himself.

Cahill grasped Lockwood's leg. Down went the chief in the mud. and he was drawn along in the procession. Hoys immediately jumped with both feet on Cahill's arm, breaking his hold and releasing Lockwood. Down River and Wall streets the procession passed, the mob growing larger each mo-ment. Threats of shooting and lynching Lockwood were freely made by the excited when the prisoner would attempt to grasp the rope or axis to relieve the strain on his ankles, Lockwood's night club would come down with terrible torce on his fingers, and Cahill would fall back exhausted.

After a quarter of a mile had been passed in this manner the mob closed in on the officers and stopped the wagon, P. H. Dwyer, a prominent citizen, grasping the bridle of the horse. The driver became frightened, but Munson Hoyt grasped the reins and tried to urge the horse through the crowd, but in vain.

to urge the horse through the crowd, but in vain.

John Maione stepped out of his store and untied the rope, and Cahill was carried codity to the lockup, where he smashed benches, the stove and other articles.

Chief Lockwood then ordered Keeper Gehebe to put his buildog, one of the most victous brutes in town, in the room to catch Cahill, in order that he might be put in a cell.

When Lockwood came on duty again a very large crowd met and hissed him, and seemed to do everything to provoke him, but he was rather nervous and let the matter pass.

he was rather nervous and let the matter pass.

Yesterday morning Cahill was brought before Justice Andrew Selleck. The prisoner presented a horrible appearance. His clothes were torn, large lumps appeared on the back of his head, and his face was badly blackened. He was charged with drunkenness, breach of the peace and resistance to officers. The trial lasted all day and Cahill was fined $7 and costs for drunkenness, and bound over to the Superior Court on the other two charges.

It is very probable, however, the Iron Moulders' Union will furnish money to carry on the case at Bridgeport.

Warden James G. Gregory suspended Lockwood from duty pending an investigation but it is very likely that he will never wield a policeman's locust again. Some of the most solid citizens witnessed the affair, and they can find no words strong enough to express their disgust.
